Company has been consolidated with the Chicago and North-Western Rakway Company under the name of the latter. By the terms of consolidation the stock of the Rakway Company will be exchanged for stock of the North-Western Company as follows: One share of North-Western Company as follows: One share of North-Western Company as follows: One share of North-Western Preferred stock, and one share of North-Western preferred stock, and one share of North-Western preferred stock, and one share of the share of Galens. The union of these Companies on the share of Galens. The union of these Companies on the terms agreed upon is undoubtedly wise, and must result in great advantage to both. They have been to a considerable extent competitors for the same business, and have suffered in consequence. They now come together upon terms entirely equitable, and which we learn were unanimously approved by the stockholders of each positional of the provided the stockholders of each position of the stockholders of each position. The effect of the consolidation upon the Securities of the North-Western Company is very obvious. It adds to the strength of its various issues of bonds; it renders its Preferred Stock one of the soundest in the market, and elevates its Common Stock alone into the rank of dividend-paying securities. The two Companies carned last year, reckoning from June 1, 1863, to May 31, 1864, as appears from their published returns, about $4,200,000. They are earning at present. Companies earned hast year, reckoning from June I, 1863, to May 31, 1864, as appears from their published returns, about $4,200,000. They are earning at present from 45 to 50 $\psi$ ent more than they earned last year. It is evident that an estimate of $5,000,000 for the earnings of the consolidated Company is moderate; yet this aggregate, after deducting 60 $\psi$ cent for running expenses, leaves 7 $\psi$ cent on $50,000,000, a larger capital than that represented by the Chicago and North-Western Company, inclusive of the Common Stock. The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Galenn and Chicago Union Railroad was held in Chicago on the last. An entirely new Board of Directors was elected, as follows: James D, Fish, William B, Scott, William R, Sands, Edward P, Baneroft, James W, Elwell, John B.
